"A man named Killen is wandering over the Province superintending the construction of roads and trails. What a farce!"

The foregoing paragraph is the opinion of the Nelson Tribune. The Tribune is usually well-informed, but this kick gives rise to the suspicion that the well-paved streets of Nelson are accepted by the Tribune as representing all the thoroughfares of the Province. In this virgin district of ozone, mineral, blazed trails and boozing the people have opinions, but in this case they are not in accord with those of the Tribune.

Let the Tribune man come here, drink in the beauties of our fair valley and such other refreshments as the old-timers in their hospitality will offer, and attempt to steer a cayuse over one of the pioneer trails of the district. At a time he will be in peril of being dropped in front of his mount, at another he will feel that he needs to be glued to the horn to keep from sliding off behind. Then try a trip on one of Killen's trails. The change will be as from a rolling sea to a luxurious Pullman.

Under Killen's regime the wagon road is the first turn of the pack trail. The money spent on the trail is not lost, as is too often the case when the old trailblazer ran the show. The trail now is the route of the wagon road, and the work of clearing the brush for the trail is so much work done on the road, to say nothing of the advantages the better grade has been to packers over the trail, as compared with the haphazard trail, which it is hoped has gone never to return. May Killen and his kind multiply and grow numerous in our land.

The Stockmen's Brotherhood is the name of a new organization which has been started with the object of forming a colony in East Kootenay, in the valley of the Columbia river, says the Canadian Gazette. Those who join the brotherhood—and when the mail let 64 families had done so—have to sign a paper agreeing to the following conditions:

This colony to be co-operative in the carrying out of the following principles:

1. If anyone of the community is overtaken by misfortune in the way of loss of crops, stock, sickness or death, it shall be the duty under the bond of this brotherhood, which is simply a bond of honor, for each member of said brotherhood to render any and all assistance in his or her power to alleviate the suffering, of whatever nature it may be.

2. Total prohibition shall be one of the safeguards thrown around this community.

3. It is hereby agreed that we, the undersigned members of this Stockmen's Brotherhood, shall not harbor, employ or deal with in any way, any Chinese or Japanese within the limits of this colony.

And we do hereby promise to uphold, protect and defend the above-mentioned principles, and to do all in our power to promote the best interests of this proposed colony.

The Columbia valley is said to be one of the prettiest and most favored in the Province, having good grass and soil, a fine climate, established mines and excellent waterway. The atmosphere is clear and dry, and the snowfall is light, making it an ideal stock country.

If these people come here and put all the above good resolution into effect and add to them plenty of hard work they are sure to be successful. May they come and many others with them. Welcome!

When thinking people come to consider how vitally the labor question affects the whole community it is probable that they will step in and insist on a method of adjudication which will prevent strikes and lockouts. The Postland Evening World in mentioning the difficulty at Northport says that everyone there would gladly welcome some well-thought-out scheme which would prevent the repeated occurrence of such a state of affairs.

A strike is always a wasteful method of settling such disputes but in every instance the general public, and particularly the business public, are affected nearly as much as the parties directly interested. No matter what industry is involved the community as a whole inevitably suffers loss and damage from these protracted struggles. The very fear of them unsettles business and does irremediable harm in many ways.

Can this state of things be prevented? The Toronto Globe thinks it can, and in an article on the C. P. R. strike says in part:

The men strike because they believe that in no other way can they compel the employers to listen to them.

Compulsory arbitration gives them another way. It may, in a particular case, lead to the defeat of the men; but they must be heard; their demands cannot be put aside with a curt refusal. And when they are provided with an impartial tribunal for the hearing of their claims, a refusal to obey the decision of the tribunal would put public opinion overwhelmingly against them. In the case of a railway strike shippers and passengers are put to grave inconvenience. They are naturally exasperated but under present conditions they do not know where to lay the blame. Under compulsory arbitration the whole force of public opinion would be directed against those who refuse to obey the decision. And it is idle to say they care nothing for public opinion. The moment a strike occurs both parties are anxious to have their side of the case presented to the public. Besides, in the case of the men disobedience would probably lead to withdrawal of the sinews of war. Workmen will support one another cheerfully when they feel that they are fighting against injustice. But would they contribute towards the support of men fighting against a law framed for the special purpose of giving them justice?

TWIN TRAGEDY LASCELLES'

A London, Eng., despatch of June 27th states that the aristocratic family of the Lascelles has more than five acres of land in the recent killing of the Chinese cook on the British Columbia ranch by one Francis J. Lascelles, son of an inmate of the asylum for the insane at St. Vincent.

Hon. R. E. Lascelles, brother of the Earl of Harewood, member of the Councils of Devon and brother of the late Lord Lascelles, was in a stage wagon at the time.

This popular artist-act has for years been exhibiting automatic pictures at country fairs under the name of "The Little." When he heard of his brother's tragedy, and of the murder of his servant near Golden, B.C., Lascelles began drinking heavily, and died from the effects.

Letters from his sister, the Countess of Dorset, and from a London lawyer were found in the dead man's pocket. A coroner was summoned, and reference was made in the letters to the trouble of his brother Francis in British Columbia.

IN THE OLD BARN LOFT.

"The thirty years of the old barn's life
I used to roll and play
And turn all kinds of summer suits
On the fresh and fragrant hay;
A lamping out at evening
To the hay so sweet and soft,
At my home away back yonder,
In the old barn loft.

How the pigeons used to flutter,
And strut about and coo!
And make love to one another
Like sweethearts used to do,
While I walked the rickety c o's beams,
Or clambered high about,
With half intent of falling,
In the old barn loft.

How I used to follow sister,
Who was looking for the eggs,
As I dashed there, head down and
Huddling by my little legs;
And giving them a ring or two,
I'd strike the hay so soft,
At my home away back yonder,
In the old barn loft.

The twittering of the swallows,
While making homes of mud;
The gleeful game of hide-and-seek,
The ship, the sudden thump,
The patter of the raindrops
Above the hay so soft,
All these memories still clinging
Of the old barn loft.

A Prospectors Home.

N. E. Lindsay, M. E., of Spokane, in a letter to the Mining & Scientific Press, San Francisco, urges the necessity for the establishment of a mine at some point in the west, of a home for old prospectors, on similar lines to the Old Man's Home at Kamloops, but much more elaborate and widely supported by the government. In conclusion Mr. Lindsay says:

"When the home is completed and ready for the prospectors, let him come, not as a mendicant, but as an honored guest, and there, in his declining years, he will live in the past. In the wretched state of the mine he will experience the shame of the old prospectors and miners huddling to some reported rich find. Again he will climb to the top of the highest mountain peak and feel sorry for the millions of people who have lived and died and never had one breath of fresh air like this. He will again be mending his shoes by the camp fire and the pine spirit will come to him from the branches above. The waterfall, the beautiful lakes, the deep forest and rolling hills will all pass

Here is Love For You!

A young lady not a thousand miles away wrote to her lover in the following language: "Dearest—My love for you is stronger than coffee and the kick of a young cow. Sensations of exquisite joy go through me like colors of ants through an army cracker, and every night I see your face over a candle and I feel as if I could fit myself to the height of the church steeple. As a mean pen hinders after sweet milk, so I hinder after your presence. And as a feeling of contentment in a madhouse, so I feel in the sea of delight, when you are near me. My heart is a plate like a shaker in a dining hall. A day's eyes stand upon like a collar

 The C. P. R. strike is felt a little in this valley, owing to freight being delayed.
 Bob Winfield and Joe Williamson went up the west side of Windermere taken Tuesday to fish they said, but in all probability they will catch some gold dust on a copper porphyry before they return.
 Henry Fitzsimmons and Frank Rick have gone to East Strake from where they will leave for Elk River, at the mouth of which they have located a ranch, which they believe to be on the right-of-way of the B. C. Southern Railway. They propose opening an hotel and working the ranch.
 Chadborn & McLean have just closed a deal whereby they have secured a one-half interest in the Black Prince and Pashier group of claims in the Windermere district. It was bought for cash from Joseph Laidlaw, Alabaster. The property was under lease to Mr. H. E. Crossdale last year for $11,000 and $1,000 was spent in development but the work was suspended late in the season and it was decided not to work during the winter as it would not be done to advantage. In the meantime the property before it was sufficiently proven to justify making the first payment. The ore is a high grade copper, showing bonite, averaging about 15 per cent copper and gives promise of being a large lead. The property is three feet wide but the width of the vein has not been determined as only one wall has been found. The property is situated on Boulder creek, on the same mountain as the famous Farnley mine which has shipped during the season 1,000 tons of ore. Mr. Crossdale owns the adjoining property, being an extension of the Black Prince and it is the intention of the owners to pool their interest and form a syndicate to work extensively at no late date.—Nelson Miner.

 A number of athletic sports have been added this year so that all kinds of fun may be anticipated.

 The first on the program is a thrilling contest which will undoubtedly be of great interest to all miners.

have seen yourself!" broke in half a dozen voices at once.
 "The night before I called for English," said the Stater, "I was giving a dinner to a number of intimate friends, when a colored waiter spilled a cup of soup over the gown of a lady at an adjoining table. The gown was utterly ruined, and the gentleman of her party at once seized the waiter, tied a rope around his neck, and at a sign from the injured lady, swung him into the air."
 "Horrible!" said the hostess, with a shudder. "And did you actually see this yourself?"
 "Well, no," said the Stater, apologetically. "Just at that time I was down stairs killing the chief for putting mustard in the bluebango."

Lynchings Extraordinary.

At a recent dinner in London the conversation turned on the subject of lynching in the United States. It was the general opinion that a rope was the chief end of man in America. Finally, the hostess turned to a United States man who had taken no part in the conversation, and said:
 "You, sir, must have often seen these things?"
 "Yes," he replied, "we take a kind municipal pride in seeing which city can show the greatest number of lynchings yearly."
